DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 112

The following is a quotation of the second paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall conclude with one or more claims particularly pointing out and distinctly claiming the subject matter which the applicant regards as his invention.

Claim 19 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention. Line 2 of claim19, says “..cutting inserts converge....”. Examiner is interpreting the sentence to mean ... “..cutting edges converge....”.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 16, 17, 19, and 24-29 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Storch (U.S. Patent No. 5,632,576) in view of Rydberg et al. (U.S. Patent No. 6,146,060).

Storch teaches a cutting plate (1) (with integrated cutting inserts 3) having a planar top side, a bottom side and a peripheral clearance surface extending between the top and bottom sides, and a through-hole (18) for receiving a mounting screw (see Figures 1 and 4). Storch also teaches the topside having spaced apart first and second convexly arch-shaped cutting edges (4), as well as a front edge part (17) and a rear edge part (14). The rear edge part (14) is shorter than and parallel to the front edge part (17).

However, Storch fails to teach the bottom side of the insert including a stabilizing structure arranged for preventing angular displacement of the insert about an axis of the hole.

Rydberg et al. teaches coupling between the bottom surface of a cutting head (12) and holder, with grooves that perpendicular (16A, B & 17 A, B) to one another and intersect one another (i.e. forming a stabilizing structure) (see figures 2A and 2C).

Therefore, it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention was made to modify the coupling surfaces between the insert and holder of Werner et al.'s invention such that it has grooves that are perpendicular to one another as well as intersect each other as taught by arm taught by Rydberg et al., for the purpose of having a tool and an insert that are easy to assembly as well as be continuously rigid and have good precision ('060, Col. 1, lines 45-51).

Allowable Subject Matter

Claims 1-15 are allowed.

The following is an examiner's statement of reasons for allowance: Schlemmer et al. (U.S. Pub. No. 2002/0094245) is the closest art of record. There is no suggestion in Schlemmer et al.'s teaching to provide the tool body with an insert that has two spaced-apart convexly arched cutting edges without destroying the intent of Schlemmer et al.'s invention.

Claims 18 and 20-23 are objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.
